FLUID CONTROL

Good news, fellow Oregonians: Art Robinson is doing something useful for the state. Art wants us to send him some human bodily fluids for his “research.” Well, considering the problems that we have had of late with bodily fluids showing up in unwanted places, such as Eugene’s downtown Park Blocks, I suggest that the officials in charge bottle, box and send post haste to Art all of the miscellaneous bodily fluids they come in contact with that they find obnoxious. I’m sure Art and his family of “research assistants” will put all of it to good use. And, bonus, whatever is left over, Art can mix together with the radioactive waste he wants to sprinkle from airplanes to build up human resistance to the degenerative illnesses that his urine research is going to identify.

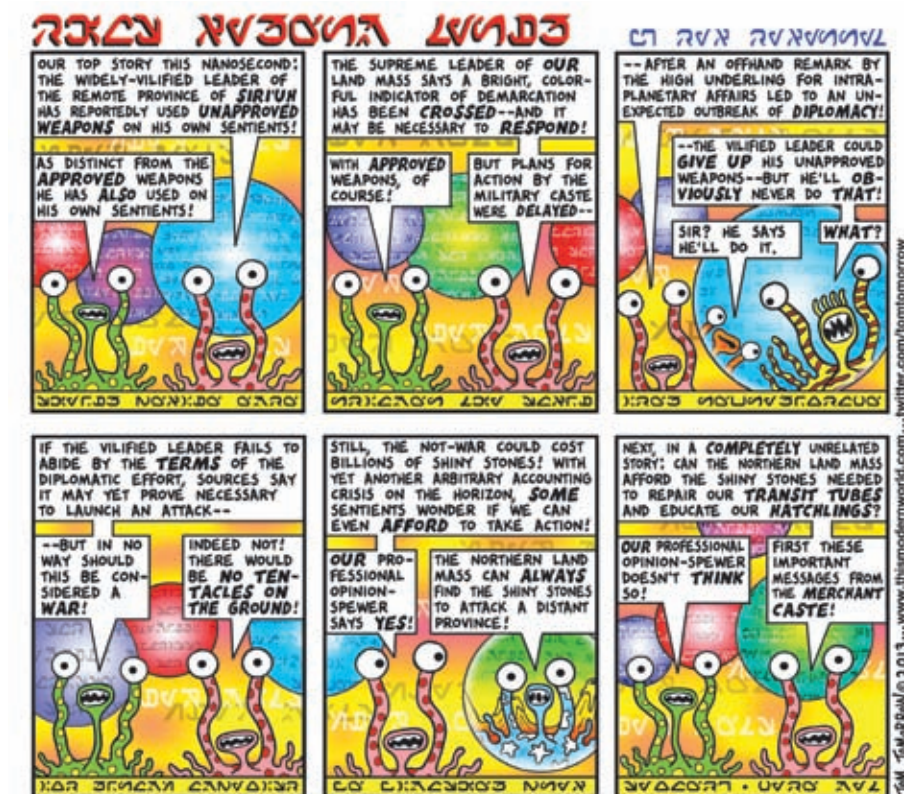

In order to expand his funding base, Art should branch out into researching mental illness. All he has to do is attend some of his party’s monthly meetings. Bring the sample bottles, Art; I’m sure you’ll find plenty of test subjects.

DISTINGUISHED FAMILY

I am offended by Chip Duyck’s letter Sept. 12. I can tell that Duyck has never met Jake Klonoski, his brothers or his parents. I have, and wish to inform Duyck that this family, to a person, has a long and distinguished history of helping people.

By the way, Mr. Duyck, I have had the honor of being in the Peace Corps, and the honor of being a captain in the Marine Corps. If we had more Jake Klonoskis and more Colin Powells, this would be a better world.

OUTSOURCED EXEMPTION

I am appreciative of level-headed folks like Paul Conte, and other like-minded citizens in Eugene. This MUPTE (Multiple-Unit Property Tax Exemption) has been a regressive idea from the beginning.

“The end justifies the means” (you can use bad or immoral methods as long as you accomplish something good) is the seeming mentality for the continuation of this program.

The latest handout of a 10-year property tax exemption was not even to a local or even state developer! The current recipient from the prostrated City Council majority was a Illinois developer of student housing.

The council approved a $4.5 million, 10-year property tax exemption. I find it humorous that Councilor Claire Syrett stated, “The promise by Core Campus to pay the city a total of $1.03 million over the last five years of the exemption made the difference in gaining her support.” OK. But how does paying the city $1.03 million for the last five years of the exemption seem like a good deal, when the city’s “giveaway” is for $4.5 million a year for 10 years? How does that make good sense? Granted, it’s better than a big fat zero that all the other “handouts” have given the city. The citizens of Eugene need to get involved in the happenings of basic city decisions. If your representatives are not speaking your concerns, replace them. Silence = acceptance.

As Paul Conte stated [EW, 8/1], the community should determine for what kinds of projects these tax breaks are granted. “One thing is certain, decisions on these important taxation and housing policies should not remain in the hands of Jon Ruiz and his pro-developer staff.”

And I agree.

CLEAN WATER MATTERS

The past few months, Oregon media have carried a back-and-forth debate about Congressman DeFazio’s plans to increase logging in Oregon’s federal forests. What is at stake?

It’s Oregon’s water — it’s the future of clean, flowing drinking water at stake.

Polling by the Pew Research Center consistently shows that clean water is what matters most to Oregonians. That is one reason why there is increasing alarm about a bill introduced by DeFazio to increase intensive logging on national forest lands. Federal environmental laws would set reasonable standards for logging, but DeFazio's bill puts Oregon's antiquated state forestry laws above federal laws. In his guest viewpoint in the R-G Sept. 3, even the congressman admits that is a bad thing.

Oregon's slack forestry laws are more than 40 years old. These rules permit the use of herbicides sprayed by helicopter. That is different from federal logging practices, which do not routinely use herbicides or allow helicopter spray. Oregon laws are notoriously lacking in water quality protections. The EPA is investigating if Oregon forestry laws even comply with the Clean Water Act.

DeFazio excuses the failure of his plan to retain federal environmental laws, saying that water quality protections "would have to come from Salem." He means that state officials would have to fix the Oregon Forest Practices Act, a set of rules and policies put in place by the Oregon Board of Forestry, a governor-appointed commission mired in politics. In comparison, Washington, Idaho and California have forestry laws that require buffer zones to better protect rural communities and water quality. For example, the state of Washington protects domestic drinking water and bans certain herbicides, including Atrazine, from use near groundwater areas. Oregon has no such protections in its forestry policy. Even Idaho has stronger protections for water. Oregon has taken a backwards direction, away from good science.

A plan that exports Oregon's politicized, obsolescent policies on to public national forests is unacceptable. We need to protect the health of rural communities, the purity of drinking water and the future viability of endangered species such as Coho salmon. Protection starts with bringing Oregon logging and pesticide spray rules into the 21st century and basing our standards on present-day science, not last century's politics.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

How to exploit money from a university that has a physically limited growth potential? Build student dorms for the rich. The new proposed high-rise near campus comes with many amenities including a lounge. The students will be like the Ducks and never have to go out into the rain except to attend the football games. The UO is doing a terrific job of attracting money. Keep up the good work.

Goodbye Greenway?

OAKLEIGH MEADOW COHOUSING SETS A CHILLING PRECEDENT

I love the Ruth Bascom Riverbank Trail System. I use it almost every day to take walks with my son and dog. We love that where we live — next to the West Bank section of the trail system — much of the trail is surrounded by the Willamette River Greenway, a mix of city parkland and open spaces.

Though houses and businesses are not far away, the greenway provides a beautiful, calming buffer adjacent to the trails. The greenway is a refuge for plants, animals and human beings alike. It contains both forest and open fields, full of stands of wild fennel and sweet pea vines, and features frequent overhead scolding from chickadees and, more rarely, showier flashes of migrating tanagers and waxwings.

This land is now under threat.

A partnership between local residents and out-of-state developers is planning to build the first residential development next to city parkland on this side of the river since the Oregon Legislature passed the Willamette River Greenway Act in 1973. The proposed site is a meadow, right at the end of my one-block, dead-end street, Oakleigh Lane. In the usual ironic way of housing developments, those promoting it have named the development after the natural space it will replace with paving and condos: Oakleigh Meadow Cohousing.

OMC will include a large number of buildings housing 28 one-, two- and four-bedroom condominiums. There will be nearly 50 parking spaces in two large garages.

All of this will be visible from the Riverbank Trail.

Bad enough, for most of us in the area (16 of the 18 homes on Oakleigh are fighting the development; the two others have not yet voiced an opinion).

But much more importantly, OMC sets a chilling precedent, opening the door for further development of privately owned land in the Willamette Greenway. If you enjoy walking, running or biking the trails along the Willamette River, consider that soon enough your views may no longer be of trees and fields, but of multiple housing or commercial developments. Are these the views you want?

The Willamette River Greenway was created to protect open space, scenic views, native vegetation and public access. OMC threatens our city's space, views and plants. It will take away habitat and beauty in Oakleigh Meadow.

It could lead to the loss of much, much more space, views and vegetation elsewhere in the greenway. If the Eugene Planning Department approves OMC, it might approve any number of additional developments.

The OMC's application for a permit for site development is up for approval at a public hearing at the Planning Department on Oct. 2. The residents of Oakleigh Lane and McClure Lane (the bordering streets) urge Eugene residents and Riverbank path users to send city planners an email registering your opposition to this project and to tell city officials you don't approve of using our city's section of the Willamette Greenway for housing or commercial development.

The Willamette Greenway should be our legacy, a treasury of protected natural space. We must act now to protect it.

Please contact Becky Taylor, the planner working on the OMC permit matter for the city of Eugene Planning Department, at becky.g.taylor@ci.eugene.or.us. For more information about opposition to this development, email the author at bovilsky2@gmail.com or saveoakleigh@gmail.com. ## SWEET POTATO BYE?

Sweet Potato Pie has been selling clothes, hemp products and local glass art for the last 16 years. Now the future of the store is uncertain as the lease for that location ends on Oct. 31 and the neighboring business, Addictive Behaviors, expands into the space.

"I have a limited amount of time to make a very serious decision," says Elizabeth Thompson, owner of the store.

Thompson says she started Sweet Potato Pie as a booth at the Saturday Market in 1994 with a lot of clothing she made herself. A few years later, funding from a local entrepreneur gave her the ability to move her stand to the corner store where it has stood for 16 years, the same age as her daughter, who was born shortly before the store's opening.

Although Sweet Potato Pie has been a long-standing part of the Eugene community, it has not always been easy to keep going. When she's not at the store, Thompson works as a manager at Goodwill, so she can "take care of myself but also pay my employees."

In addition to her employees, many local small businesses have benefited from Sweet Potato Pie. "Eighty percent of my store is locally made. It's why I'm not ready to give up. I'm not the only person who depends on that income," Thompson says. "There's a person behind every product in this business."

The news that her lease was ending was sudden, but Thompson is hoping to find a new location before Halloween. Currently, she's keeping her eyes fixed on the Whiteaker. "I want to go where it feels like a neighborhood," and the Whit has that community feel she's looking for. If she can't find a new location, the only option is closing down the store.

"I feel really grateful I've had 16 years, I just hope I get another 16," she says.

HOMELESS ADVOCATES, POLICE AT ODDS

An uneasy peace between authorities and homeless activists was threatened Sept. 11, as a series of incidents unfolded downtown and elsewhere.

Conrad Barney was up all night, planning a demonstration for the anniversary of 9/11. The activist with SLEEPS (Safe Legally Entitled Emergency Places to Sleep), who spent 57 days on hunger strike last winter to underscore the plight of the homeless, climbed a footbridge over Pearl Street, where he spray-fixed poster-drawn letters into a message — LIVE H8 FREE — across the walkway, which shadows Eugene's homeless memorial.

"People need to be allowed to release their passion," Barney says, adding that all government officials "know how to do is ignore us and put up fences." Barney, who was then arrested for trespassing, yelled, "I am a messenger of love, peace, hope and freedom," while taken into police custody. The mood there was tense, probably due to what had transpired only one block to the west and a few hours earlier.

"I had an agreement with them," says Alley Valkyrie, SLEEPS police liaison. She expected a call from Eugene police officers before they approached SLEEPS members Rusty Savage and Joshua Tonkin at the Lane County Public Service Building. A Eugene Police Department spokesperson says that Savage and Tonkin had locked themselves in their tent and that their behavior precluded them from the benefit of a protest liaison. Still, Valkyrie says, "I told them. You've got people over here with mental illnesses and police-triggered emotional issues who have dealt with trauma."

Witnessing the arrest of Savage and Tonkin, Larry Pleasant, a 55-year-old homeless man with documented behavioral health issues, crashed through a human police barricade. According to police and witnesses, Pleasant, while being subdued at each limb, kicked an officer in the head. Pleasant was arrested for assaulting the officer, while SLEEPS members Ashley Dischamny and Angela Bartow were later arrested for interference and harassment.

Dischamny says she was actually deescalating the situation. "I was there to protect police — to make sure they don't get hurt." Dischamny, who says she was in a unique position to calm Pleasant, who trusts her, was pleading for him to stop kicking. "He was absolutely having a PTSD [post-traumatic stress disorder] moment," she says.

Dischamny, who had been wearing a walking cast as her broken foot heals, was "thrown off the pile" by an officer, and when she hit the ground, she says, it re-broke two bones. She had removed the cast in order to reach Pleasant faster. Dischamny was then treated by Occupy Medical. Tonkin and Bartow sustained injuries they allege occurred in Lane County jail custody and were inflicted in response to "bogus" claims of noncompliance.

Tonkin has two broken fingers and a separated wrist. Bartow required stitches for a facial cut and has bruises across one shoulder. Both were treated at Sacred Heart Medical Center University District. A Lane County Sheriff's Office corrections spokesperson could not comment on the specific injuries, but says, "Injuries sustained within our facility are reviewed to ensure ... [safety and security] procedures have been followed."

Eugene police, in an apparent crackdown following Pleasant's outburst, simultaneously visited the Whoville #1 homeless camp, near Lane County Fairgrounds, where they seized camping bags and tents belonging to those not readily present. Officers also issued citations to four campers at a sister site on River Road.

Valkyrie says the whole homeless community is being punished for Pleasant's actions and that, though she doesn't condone violence by protesters, she believes police could have prevented the fiasco easily. Instead, she says, "They amped it up. They went in there like stormtroopers."

Rebates for ductless heat pumps are being offered by local utilities EWEB and EPUD. EPUD announced last week that its rebates for ductless heat pumps have been raised from $1,000 to $1,500 for a limited time, and for the first time, $350 rebates are being offered on heat pump water heaters through Oct. 31. EWEB currently offers $500 rebates on ductless heat pumps for both homeowners and landlords, and the incentives are expected to go up to $750 later this year, says Lance Robertson, spokesperson for EWEB. "We will also be offering zero-interest loans, up to $4,000," he says. "Not sure other utilities do that." Robertson says EWEB is in the process of redesigning all of its conservation programs, and "there will be a host of other offerings."

Rolf Prima, the Eugene performance bike wheel company, reports it is "bringing the manufacturing back to the U.S.," and has started manufacturing alloy bicycle rims in-house. "It has been a long time in the making and we are very proud to finally make it public," says Brooke Stehley of the company. See rolfprima.com or call (888) 308-7700.

Chrysalis, an adult outpatient drug and alcohol treatment program of White Bird Clinic, has a new location at 350 E. 11th Ave. in Eugene and will be hosting an open house from 12:30 to 2:30 pm Thursday, Sept. 26. Call 683-1641 or see whitebirdclinic.org for more information.

BoltBus plans to expand its premium bus service to Eugene and Albany Oct. 3. The service from Eugene will include four roundtrips daily from 5th Street Public Market to Portland Thursday to Monday, with several schedules each week continuing on to Seattle. In Albany, BoltBus will operate service from the Albany Transit Center four days a week to Portland and Eugene. Currently, BoltBus, a division of Greyhound, operates in the Seattle, Bellingham, Portland and Vancouver areas. Tickets and more information can be found at boltbus.com or from drivers on a walk-up basis.

Shirley Lyons, owner of Dandelions Flowers & Gifts, 1710 Chambers St. in Eugene, will be inducted as president of the Society of American Florists at the trade association's national convention in Arizona Saturday, Sept. 21. Lyons will be the first woman to hold this office in the 130-year history of the society, which represents the entire floriculture industry in North America. As part of her duties as president, she will travel in early October to Bogota, Colombia, to attend the bi-annual Colombian ProFlora fresh flower exhibition. See dandelionsflowers.com.

City Club of Eugene is surveying its members about the location of its meetings (currently held at the Hilton), the food offerings and cost, and program topics. About 55 people responded to the survey as of last week, so results are preliminary. LCC's Downtown Campus meeting room is running a bit more popular than the Hilton as a venue. Third place is the Downtown Athletic Club followed by Cozmic. About the food? "It costs too much" got a 46 percent response compared to "Just right" getting a 28 percent response. The lunch meeting this Friday, Sept. 20, at the Hilton will have Scott Freck, executive director of the Eugene Symphony Association, speaking on "What Makes the Eugene Symphony Work?"

Noble Estate Vineyard and Winery just outside Eugene took six awards at the recent Sunriver Sunfest Wine Festival, including Best of Show for its Semi-Sparkling Muscat, says Amy Shadell of Noble Estate. See nobleestatewinery.com.

POLLUTION UPDATE

It appears that the city of Eugene has completed its annual review of stormwater monitoring from the 76 local facilities that discharge industrial stormwater to local waterways pursuant to the statewide Clean Water Act industrial stormwater permit. The city oversees compliance at these facilities under an agreement with the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ). The city recently sent “request for corrective action” letters to Bulk Handling Systems (suspended solids), Schnitzer Steel Industries (suspended solids, oil and grease, and copper) and Western Structures (zinc) for failing to submit required plans addressing elevated pollution levels in discharges. The city also sent request for corrective action letters to the following six facilities for failure to conduct required four-times-a-year monitoring during the 2012-13 monitoring period (which runs from July 1 to June 30): Al’s Sheet Metal, Armur Coatings, Architectural Millwork Mfg. Company, Farwest Steel Fabrication Company, Newood Display Fixtures and Ninkasi Brewing Company.

FORWARD FOUNDATION PROMOTES OWNERSHIP

When it comes to helping the needful and underprivileged, social welfare only seems to take us so far. Band-Aid policies that grant assistance help those who require a leg up, but dependence is not independence, no matter how well intentioned. Human beings want to be engaged, and this is where Carolyn Hodge’s Forward Foundation takes assistance one step further.

Forward Foundation is a newly established nonprofit in Eugene that donates mobile homes to struggling but upward-moving families stable enough to take over the necessary finances. The idea, Hodge says, is that ownership instills in folks a sense of engagement and dignity — something sometimes lacking when people get stuck on the cycle of social welfare.

“It’s going to be kept very simple,” Hodge says. “The trailer will be donated to them. The only thing that we really ask in return is two things — that they be willing to donate 15 to 20 hours of their time over the next year toward refurbishing trailers for other people, and then we’ll give them a month to settle down and we’ll have a celebration.”

Bonnie Paquin and Sandy Barnett, the foundation’s other members, are fully on-board with Hodge’s vision. “We’re looking for people who already have some commitments,” Paquin says. “The nice thing about this program is it gives a family a home, so that they can move in and have some of their dreams. This is really a focus for people who are working their butts off. This is an opportunity for them to do that.”

Barnett agrees. “It’s like a hand up to help people who are already struggling,” she says, noting that right now they are building “direct support” from the community through fundraisers and outreach.

Forward Foundation already has a slew of local fundraisers on slate. The Never Ever Band plays a benefit at 8:30 pm Sunday, Sept. 22, at Sam Bond’s; Rocktopia rocks another fundraising event Sept. 28 at Cornucopia on 5th; and a Masquerade Ball is set for Oct. 27 at Cozmic, featuring music from Davy Jones’ Locker Combo, The Effies and Cash Only.

Hodge says she’s hoping to get their first family into a trailer by spring. “I want to bring it nationally,” she says of Forward Foundation.

PARTY ON FOR MARRIAGE EQUALITY!

Those ubiquitous blue-shirted Basic Rights Oregon (BRO) volunteers have been hard at work this summer. Since July, activists hoping to achieve marriage equality and overturn Oregon’s ban on gay marriage have gathered 80,764 signatures (of the 116,284 necessary to qualify) for the November 2014 ballot. Eugeneans can get involved from 2 to 4 pm Sunday, Sept. 22, at BRO’s annual garden party fundraiser at a private residence.

“It’s going to be a really wonderful opportunity for people to be able to connect with the campaign and really get involved,” says Kathy Formella, a community orga-

WEEKEND OF CLIMATE CHANGE ACTIONS, FUN

The Oregon Republican Party might have elected climate change-denier and urine-sampler Art Robinson to be its chair, but these days most Oregonians understand that manmade climate change is changing our planet. Groups in Portland and Corvallis will be hosting anti-climate change “Draw the Line: Stop Keystone XL” events on Sept. 21, and in Eugene there will be a “Pancakes not Pipelines” fundraising breakfast.

The science, policies and protests are piling up. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change’s (IPCC) working group and synthesis report on the physical science basis for climate change will take place in Sweden Sept. 23-26 and provide a summary for policy makers. Avid newswatchers are seeing fracking equipment in Colorado submerged in floodwaters from an unseasonal storm as well as leaks from pipelines and oil extraction. And activists along the Columbia River and into Idaho and Montana are protesting megaloads of tar sands equipment. Here in Oregon, activists such as Mary DeMocker will be participating in nationwide group 350.org’s Saturday events that will “tell President Obama that there is no turning back — to keep his climate promises, he has to stop Keystone XL and the tar sands.” DeMocker says there will be an anti-Keystone XL rally in Corvallis at noon Saturday at Fire Station #1, at the Northeast corner of Harrison Boulevard and 4th Street.

DeMocker, who is a freelance writer and harpist, will be providing the music for the Portland “Draw the Line” event with environmental ethicist Kathleen Dean Moore (see DeMocker’s interview with Moore in the May 29 issue of EW online). The Portland event starts at 2 pm and includes workshops. DeMocker says a 5 pm photo opportunity will include participants singing a climate song from Belgium. “It’s a polka, so we’ll play with that aspect and get some dancing going.” She says the group still needs an accordion player.

While Eugene doesn’t have a 350.org event listed as of press time, there is no shortage of climate activism in town.

Also on Sept. 21, the $5 all-you-can-eat “Pancakes not Pipelines” breakfast at Wesley Foundation, 1236 Kincaid St., will raise funds for the Unist’ot’en Action Camp in Canada. The camp “is a resistance community whose purpose is to protect sovereign Wet’suwet’en territory from several proposed pipelines from the tar sands gigaproject and shale gas from hydraulic fracturing projects in the Peace River region,” according to the event’s facebook page.

nizer with BRO's Oregon United For Marriage coalition. While the campaign is off to a successful start, she says it will need more volunteers to finish signature gathering and to persuade equality-minded voters to turn in their ballots come November 2014.

Jeana Frazzini, executive director of Basic Rights Oregon, will update partygoers on the status of the campaign and how they can help, and Mayor Kitty Piercy and Oregon House Majority Leader Val Hoyle will also help out with the celebration. LCC instructor Mark Harris will provide entertainment. The suggested donation is $25, but no one will be turned away.

Formella says that attitudes have changed a lot in Oregon, and in Eugene, since the amendment banning marriage equality won a popular vote in 2004, illustrated by the reaction to one BRO-shirted petition-gatherer walking along the street in Eugene. "A total stranger pulled over abruptly, jumped out of the car and said, 'I need to sign the petition! I've been looking for one,'" she says. • Winter is approaching and the homeless among us are in increasing danger. The city of Eugene has spent millions over the years on programs to assist the homeless, the City Council has wrestled with many less-than-perfect proposals, local churches and nonprofits have struggled to provide life-saving services and facilities, human rights activists have protested and been arrested. It's not enough. Thousands in our community still have no warm place to sleep, no place to prepare meals, no place to try to rebuild their lives. Homelessness has no single cause so there is no single solution. But we do need to think bigger, much bigger. Other cities and counties have legalized large, permanent tent camps on public land or have allocated unused buildings or parking garages for temporary shelter. Other local governments have decriminalized being homeless. Lane County has the brainpower and creativity to come up with solutions. The will? Not so much.

• We're still waiting for the investigative report that led to Lane County firing its administrator Liane Richardson. We are also still waiting for the results of the criminal investigation by the Marion County District Attorney's Office. The county gets points for not making any payouts to Richardson, and it's a good idea to have an agreement that precludes lawsuits — after all, Richardson's tenure at the county has led to a lot of layoffs, lawsuits, payouts and, ironically given how her position ended, outside investigations. But let's put an end to secrecy and distrust at the county, shall we? Release the documents, stop the snark and sniping between commissioners and start, if not fresh, then at least clean.

• "Left-leaning Eugene Weekly"? That's what Scott Nelson called us in a Sept. 13 letter in the R-G blasting "self-styled economist" Ernie Niemi and Art Johnson (part-owner of the left-leaner) for their op-ed piece Aug. 27 opposing the wild forest bill swirling around Oregon and Congress. In his letter, Nelson didn't bother to disclose who's buttering his toast. He's identified by LinkedIn as the senior vice-president of finance and administration and CFO of Rosboro paper and forest products company. Guess how he's leaning? Nelson apparently didn't check Niemi's Harvard credentials or his decades of professional experience in economic analysis.

• Rep. Sara Gelser of Corvallis has announced she's running for Oregon State Senate. Gelser, an advisory board member of Emerge Oregon, which trains strong Democratic women candidates, made a good showing in the Legislature this year with the passage of HB 2427, barring the planting of commercial quantities of canola in the Willamette Valley for five years while funding an OSU study on the crop. She also shepherded through bills on seclusion rooms and restraint in public schools and is known for speaking up for women and the disabled. If Gelser wins in 2014 it gives the Dems in the Senate a stronger majority. The seat is currently held by Republican Betsy Close, who was appointed after then-senator Frank Morse retired.

• How best to respond to bigotry and hatred? Last week we wrote about the racist banner that was hung on an I-5 footbridge, and we've seen strong, thoughtful statements in response from community leaders and organizations. Early Friday morning, Sept. 13, a group called Emerald Valley Anti-Racists dropped a banner over the side of the parking garage at Olive and 7th in Eugene, reading "Fight the racists, hunt them down, kick the Nazis out of town." We appreciate the passion behind this protest banner, but taken literally, the message seeks to deny people their constitutional rights. The idea of kicking some Nazi butts is appealing, but it's more effective to fight injustice with justice, bigotry with education, intolerance with tolerance, hatred with compassion. A photo of the banner along with comments by the group can be found at the Portland Independent Media Center website, wkly.ws/1jy.

• You might have seen our Art Director Todd Cooper taking photos around town of musicians and everyday people that we run in our paper and he posts to our blog. One of his shots, taken of Diarrhea Planet performing at Tiny Tavern Sept. 15, got picked up by Rolling Stone's "Hottest Live Photos of 2013" online. See the photo at wkly.ws/1jz.

DEATH CAFÉ ENCOURAGES OPEN CONVERSATION

After Carolyn Knox lost her 38-year-old son to brain cancer, the grief of losing a child consumed her. She couldn't stop questioning: Why did this happen? Where did he go? As time passed, Knox recognized that her thoughts on death weren't going anywhere, and she needed to find a way to address them.

"All of the sudden, I realized the questions and the feelings I was having are really valid," says Knox, who works as a research associate at UO. "There's something about mortality that's an essential part of being human. If we were machines and we had no sense of ever having to go away, it would be entirely different. It makes us human in a way that's so essential that we don't really think about it."

Knox eventually found Death Café, an international movement that seeks to lessen the taboo on death and get people talking about it without apprehension. Started in Europe, Death Café provides a forum in which people can discuss death-related issues, tackle questions and dig deeper into the unknown, with the added benefit of tea and cake. It's not group therapy, a religious occasion or a counseling session — just a chance to chat about death with a group of open-minded individuals.

Before becoming involved in Death Café, Knox set up a table at the 2012 Eugene Celebration with a banner that said, "Normalize the conversation on death and grief." She was swamped with people interested in talking about death.

"I have been through hospice training, and I know that when you have a death in your family, it's very awkward to talk about death open and honestly," Knox says. "And yet death is everywhere, and we don't talk about it in a normal kind of way."

Knox and five others in her group created a Death Café for the Eugene-Springfield area, and the first meeting is scheduled for Sept. 24. "There's a need in our community for this conversation," Knox says. "Everybody needs to be able to normally talk about death, whatever their questions and beliefs are."

Knox says this month's meeting is completely booked, but she hopes to hold another in October. Those interested in attending the next event can register online at deathcafe.com/deathcafe/85/. — Amy Schneider

EUGENE SOCCER JOINS TIMBERS ALLIANCE

Eugene Metro Fútbol Club is moving on up, with a new connection, new name and new opportunities for its more than 500 players. EMFC has joined forces with the Portland Timbers and its Timbers Alliance, becoming Eugene Timbers Fútbol Club and, in turn, notably allowing its youth groups to play on a bigger stage.

The Eugene club is one of six in the region to be invited by the Timbers. The other five are from Vancouver, Wash., Portland (Westside and Eastside), Bend and the Rogue Valley. "We're really excited that the Timbers acknowledge the quality of our club and want us to be part of this group of six," says Derek Johnson, president of the EMFC board of directors.

This relationship with the Timbers will give players from Eugene's club new colors for its uniforms — red and black — and the chance to play for Timbers Alliance teams. These teams, with talent pooled from the six clubs, will play in some of the larger tournaments across the country in front of prospective college coaches. Before joining the Timbers Alliance, EMFC didn't have the means to participate.

"For instance, if the alliance of six clubs wants to put together an U-15 [under 15 years old] team to go to the Dallas Cup in Dallas they would have tryouts for that team," Johnson says. "It gives our kids opportunity for exposure and higher quality soccer they just would not be able to get through an individual club."

Johnson credits the efforts of Jürgen Ruckaberle, EMFC's director of coaching, who helped gain this kind of recognition from the Timbers. "EMFC, under Jürgen's leadership and the quality of our coaching, has really become one of the top clubs in the state," Johnson says.

Coaches will have access to coaching clinics with the Portland Thorns and Timbers, which excites Ruckaberle in addition to what the alliance means to the players. "Our players will benefit because our coaches will have more experience and expertise," Ruckaberle says.

It's a win-win, and all in all, it's a testament to just how big soccer has become. "It gives kids the opportunity to realize there is more out there than the local team here in Eugene," Johnson says. "There's more opportunity if you want to excel and look to the bigger picture." — Nick Poust

TARGETING OPPRESSION

Trans activist Ariel Howland seeks better treatment for all

'I don't think any kind of oppression is more important than any other.'

- ARIEL HOWLAND

Overlaying the woodland camouflage pattern on her T-shirt, thin pink lines swirl together into a scene of butterflies hovering over cowering riot police and flames rising in the background. Ariel Howland, a recent graduate of the University of Oregon's Department of Women's and Gender Studies (WGS), has some major beefs with the establishment — patriarchy, homophobia, transphobia, racism, ableism, etc.

Howland, a transwoman, actually identified as a straight boy through puberty and had no gay or trans friends to speak of. Still, hearing the all-too-common "That's so gay," she would retort, "What's wrong with being gay?" In high school, only just finding herself, she took great interest in politics and social movements and dreamed of being a demonstrator.

As a university freshman, Howland went through a protracted discovery process. She was bisexual, pansexual and finally transgender. WGS education confirmed her long-running subconscious gender dispute. "At first it came out of nowhere," she says. "Then I thought more about my childhood and inner self and saw the connection with other trans experiences."

In November 2012, Howland organized a benefit at Lorax Manor to aid grand jury resisters she knew, who were temporarily imprisoned for refusing to testify. A May Day anti-capitalist protest last year in Seattle saw clashes between police and protesters, and the FBI had been dragnetting potential anarchists. "All were very good, principled people," says Howland, whose event educated young activists about dangers they face.

This summer, hosting a workshop at the local Trans and Womyn's Action Camp (TWAC), Howland taught fellow activists about transmisogyny, the practice of denying a transwoman her femaleness. "Before I met Ariel, I didn't realize there was so much commonality between being mixed race and being trans," says Ceslie Garza, fellow TWAC organizer. "You feel like, 'I don't belong here, but I don't belong there either.'"

The transgendered, Howland says, are largely exotified in popular culture, and employers discriminate against them, especially while transitioning. "The only industry where there's a big demand for trans people is porn," says Howland, who despises inequity, but loves sex.

After taking the yearlong Sexual Wellness Advocacy Team (SWAT) course at the university, which enhanced her confidence as a public speaker, Howland founded Beautiful, Lovely, Intelligent and Super Sexy (BLISS), a sex-positive collective, through which she challenged her peers' sexual expectations and desires. Howland has thrown several "genderfuck" birthday parties, which she says are about "having an androgynous presentation on purpose — making gender expression a game." People often arrive in such whimsical combinations as a corset and moustache.

With SWAT, Howland also worked to promote consent, shifting the focus of sexual violence to perpetrators and bystanders. "If there was more accountability in communities in general," she says, "we would have a smaller problem." Sarah Greene, a former Lorax dweller, recalls that, "At weekly consensus meetings, if something intense was going on in the house and people felt unsafe, Ariel would come and talk about it." Howland, who completed volunteer training with Sexual Assault Support Services of Lane County, offered asides from meetings to deal with harassment and other issues.

"Ariel's activism is on a very personal level," says Greene, who constantly discusses her identity with Howland. "My family loves me and I'm glad they do, but I don't have either of their experiences," she says. Greene, like Garza, is both biracial and queer. Greene says that if her parents argue in public on occasion, as most couples do, "That puts my [African-American] father at risk of being [profiled] for yelling at a white woman." Garza adds that, "I've had to experience being in a grocery store with my dad, who [is much darker than me], and people accused him of kidnapping me."

"I take into account what I think I can contribute," says Howland, who has focused on gender because of its familiarity, but hopes to get wiser on issues of racism and ableism, in order to be a better ally. She is also the founder of Transgender Oregon Network on Facebook.

We should "take an intersectional approach and tackle more than one issue at a time," Howland says. "I don't think any kind of oppression is more important than any other." ■

STATE OF THE ARTS

A letter from the arts editor

Only a fool will tell you how to experience art. But in the interest of EW's inaugural visual arts issue, Arts Hound, I'm willing to play the fool. You see, in the past year as arts editor, I have encountered a widespread epidemic in Eugene: artphobia. "I just don't get art," people tell me, avoiding galleries, museums, art walks like the plague for fear of being, or being seen as, out of their element.

As an arts writer and an artist, this has caused me much consternation, and thus, I offer an antidote for this aesthetic anxiety: There's nothing to "get." Art is life, culture, politics, religion, history, the future. It's a reflection of society. It's a reflection of you. There are no wrong answers here. Saying that you don't "get" art is like saying you don't "get" life. It may be true, but that does not mean you opt out of the experience all together.

Artists, however, must uphold their end of the bargain, which is to produce work that makes you feel something, anything. The American novelist James Baldwin said it better than I ever could: "Artists are here to disturb the peace." Whether it be through style, content, technique, medium or process, art should evoke; it should rattle, soothe, repulse, anger, tickle or enlighten the human spirit. Anything less is decoration — beautiful decoration maybe, but decoration nonetheless.

In these pages, we sought out people in the local visual arts community who are doing just that. So artists and art amateurs, forget "get." Engage, disturb the peace and push the conversation forward. — Alex Notman

JERRY ROSS

Jerry Ross has always been a pioneer: first by helping to sustain the New Zone Art Collective, followed by spearheading the creation of Downtown Initiative for the Visual Arts.

Now the renowned Eugene oil painter has created his signature style, "American Verismo," after discovering the Macchiaioli movement led by a group of rebellious Tuscan painters working in Florence in the mid-19th century.

"I was kind of astonished that here's a group of painters painting in my style," Ross says. "It's a looser brush, freer, more spontaneous pre-Impressionist kind of painting. So I've kind of adapted it to American scenes."

American scenes include those like the homeless advocacy group SLEEPS, which Ross painted downtown during Create! Eugene's Plein Air Paint Out last month, channeling the Macchiaioli's inclination to use their art to comment on social issues. Through American Verismo, Ross creates figurative and landscape oil paintings that straddle the line between Impressionism and abstraction.

A fervent Italophile, Ross travels with his wife to Italy every year for inspiration, returning to his Eugene studio lofted high in the barn of an alpaca farm. Muses range from his wife to Italian beaches to the alpacas grazing below his studio. "I paint directly what I see," he says. "If I'm in Italy I'm painting Italians; if I'm here I'm painting the faces of animals!" Catch Ross' art at Out on a Limb and Noli Ristorante Italiano through September before he jets back to Italy.

ANALEE FUENTES

As the leaves change from summer green to the burnt auburn of fall, so do the artistic influences of Mexican painter Analee Fuentes. Having just been featured in American Angler magazine and the Eugene Celebration's Mayor's Art Show for large oil paintings of the midsection of colorful Atlantic salmon and rainbow trout, Fuentes slowly starts pulling away from her scaly summer friends and starts to paint creatures of a different kind — Día de los Muertos skeletons.

Most noted for her tongue-in-cheek Day of the Dead depictions like the "Bona Lisa" and "Sacrilege Sells: Michtlantecutl's Revenge" (featuring a new spin on Rogue's Dead Guy Ale label), Fuentes recently combined her love of fish and reptiles with a deep-rooted fascination for the upcoming Mexican celebration of Día de los Muertos. The hybrids come to life in the form of mermaids — half fish, half beautifully bathing skeletons.

"This time of year I start thinking about the fall and the cycles of life and death," she says. "I thought I'd keep within the fish theme and do some mermaids." When Fuentes' mother, a painter and craft hobbyist, died, she inherited folders that housed clippings of her mother's creative influences; one in particular was titled "Mermaid Ideas."

"They're a big deal in Mexico," she says of the mythical creatures. "So it's kind of a personal thing, like finishing something my mom started, but also a cultural thing." Fuentes' mermaids, as well as a few other skeletal surprises, will be on view at the Maude Kerns Art Center's 20th Annual Día de los Muertos exhibit Oct. 19 to Nov. 8.

BRYAN PUTNAM

Journey into Bryan Putnam's ongoing narrative art epic I AM RAINIER, which tells the story of Northwest legends and tackles the tension of human beings' separation from the natural world. The Washington native explores wilderness theory and folklore in the form of sketches, paintings and prints (think Smokey Bear meets environmental collapse) as well as installations that employ video, text and performance.

"I think what I've always loved about art is the ability to create another world and just exercise your imagination," he says. At his exhibition Free Range at the LaVerne Krause Gallery in January, Putnam created a visual environment using video, text, drawings, paintings and potted plants, as well as wearing a brown bear costume to bring his character "Hokey Bear" to life. Putnam explains that his paradoxical character is a light-hearted way to explore the feeling of having a domesticated barrier between himself and the world he wishes to be closer to.

Recently Putnam was asked to contribute four traffic box paintings for the city's Art the Box project. He says each painting is about a "desire to bring this wildness into town." Come October, Putnam will have a chance to bring the wildness into the town of Sweet Home through the Art in Rural Storefronts project. "Art is like planting a seed," he says. "I really want to be able to create something that is dynamic enough and rich enough that you can kind of get lost in it."

JENNY KROIK

Whether she's collaborating with filmmakers on stop-motion film projects, updating her watercolor blog with new tutorials or creating beautiful paintings for commercial use, Russian-born artist Jenny Kroik is a true Renaissance woman.

"I try to be very diverse in my ways of painting so I don't become a slave to one process," she says. "If you sit and draw for too long you just go insane."

As a painter, Kroik uses a classical watercolor style to bring everyday characters to life in her bright bouquet of paintings, lending a sense of timelessness to 21st-century quotidian scenes: a flannel-clad man using a smartphone on the train, a blue-mohawked woman at a body piercing parlor. "I'm kind of a gawker and I stare shamelessly," she admits. Kroik jokes that browsing through her paintings is "kind of like taking a walk with crazy Jenny on the street."

Kroik, a UO art instructor, started thinking of how she could use technology to get people excited about art and created her blog so that anyone could access step-by-step watercolor tutorials. She also collaborates for animation and stop motion film projects. Her project "Mud Lair" with local filmmaker Julia Oldham will be showcased in New York this October. Kroik's next project will be an ode to her local love affair. "I've been wanting to do a book with all my Portland portraits," she says. "I might do one of Eugene!"

Take a walk with "crazy Jenny" and view her art at jenny.kroik.net. See Kroik's 'Paige vs. U-Lock' on cover.

THE TREE WHISPERER

Dutch artist Floris Brasser whittles Whiteaker maple into sculpture

BY RICK LEVIN

Wednesday, Sept. 11: Wood chips and sawdust fly helter skelter from the grinding teeth of a chainsaw as Dutch artist Floris Brasser stands perched atop the massive trunk of a tree in the courtyard of New Day Bakery. This is not a demolition job. It is not some Paul Bunyan act, though Brasser is something of a tree whisperer.

"I started peeling the thing," Brasser says of getting started last week, when he inaugurated his monthlong project of turning the broad-leaf maple into a giant sculpture. "That's always an initiating ritual for me, to get known with the tree, what's really there. It's going to be a dream catcher, a sky catcher, I don't know. It will remain exciting until it's there."

The tree trunk stands about 10 feet high, with a diameter of 6 feet or so; the five truncated limbs spread out and upward from the base, like a hand in the process of unclasping. Along with a chainsaw, which he runs on clean fuel and organic oil, the tools of Brasser's trade include a bark peeler, a disk grinder with router bits, a chisel and a mallet.

An international artist who works almost exclusively with wood, Brasser has been commissioned to make a sculpture out of the maple that was limbed for safety reasons last summer. New Day owner Bill Mahoney first met Brasser in 1990, when the bakery was located down the street from its present location. When Mahoney traveled to Europe last January, he decided to look up Brasser in Amsterdam. They hadn't seen each other, nor spoken, in 17 years.

Brasser drove Mahoney and his companions around Holland in his flatbed truck. "He comes from a neighborhood where there's Rembrandt and Van Gogh," Mahoney says of Brasser's homeland. "That's where he comes from. He's always been an artist." Mahoney showed Brasser some photos of the trimmed tree, urging him to come abroad and make art. "It took a while to really get serious about it, but we got serious," Mahoney says. "We've had a discussion of what to do. It's going to be something abstract, something that shows gratitude."

For Brasser, public art is "an evocative way to confront the senses." As our increasing urban density squeezes out free civic space, the role of art, Brasser suggests, is to become a sort of "mind balm for the people."

Whether it is his 2003 Border Project in Belgium, which poses two unconnected ends of a bridge that do not actually span the gap of a river, or his current work in progress in Eugene, Brasser says he believes that public art should enliven and confront our sense of who we are and where we live. "We lose our senses with technology," he explains, adding that "because it goes so gradually we accept it as normal. I don't think it is normal. It's tragic."

Brasser says he doesn't want to add more sculptures to museums; he wants his work to be a part of our lives, where we can see and even touch it. "That's why I make art, to get people involved, to get them curious," he explains. "For me, it's a social act. It's about dialogue. If it's figurative, it's clear what it is, but if it's abstract you can project your own fantasy."

Brasser will continue sculpting the maple through September, and he invites folks to come down, grab a coffee and some food at New Day and enjoy the show. ■

CREATING A CULTURE OF CRITIQUE

One year in, Eugene Contemporary Art pushes past local art scene's status quo BY SILAS VALENTINO • PHOTOS BY TRASK BEDORTHA

Down by the railroad tracks that carve through the Whiteaker, graffiti art colors the walls of buildings. A large piece spray painted in white advises its audience to “Read up!” but it’s the paint drippings below that inspired local artist Josh Sands. “I saw the paint under the graffiti and thought, ‘Can I take graffiti paint and make something out of it?’” he says.

Sands has collected “found paint” not only in Eugene, but also in L.A., San Francisco and Berlin, and with it he sets to work on his latest project. The artist secures the old paint, which he “excavated like an archeologist,” to a plywood board by applying another layer of paint. After multiple rounds of sanding away the excess layers of paint, beautiful shades of color begin to appear.

These are the kind of pieces that will be featured in Sands’ residency, which began Aug. 19, at Eugene Contemporary Art (ECA). He is meticulously crafting his unconventional brand of art — sometimes under the gaze of the community, which can come meet the artist during open studio. His work is in a state of flux, changing with Sands’ inspirations and ideas.

ECA has made itself the spot for experimenting and developing contemporary art. “They’re more interested in coming from a place of ideas and concepts,” Sands says of ECA’s art perspective. “I don’t know if there are other spots in Eugene that would be open to such a loose interpretation.”

ECA is celebrating its one-year anniversary this fall, currently featuring its fourth artist in the residency program, Public Process, where an artist uses The WAVE gallery as a studio for six weeks. Every Thursday night the gallery is open to the public. “Their goal is to get the public involved,” Sands says.

“Real art-making comes out of a trial-and-error process,” says ECA Executive Director Courtney Stubbert. “We thought, what if we just gave someone a key and residency and gave the public the chance to see how the artist came to be?”

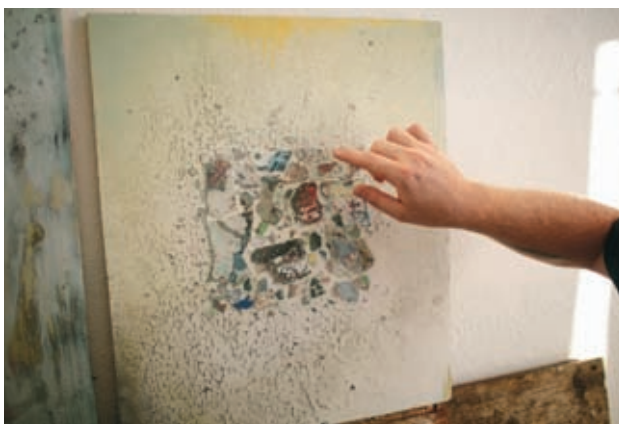

ECA and Public Process have been growing, but contemporary art has only begun to brew in Eugene.

“Eugene art is stuck in the ’60s and ’70s activist culture,” Stubbert says. “Since I’ve grown up here, I haven’t seen any change. When everyone in town is an art fan and there’s no culture of critique or wanting to raise the bar, you get a lot of mediocre art that doesn’t really affect culture.”

Jessi DiTillio, the assistant curator of contemporary art at the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art, believes contemporary art is on the right path here in Eugene. “I think the enthusiasm is there, the art and artists exist, and the key is just tuning in to what is happening,” she says. “Of course, a lot of the artists who go to school here are prone to go to bigger cities because there are more places to show their work, a larger audience and, most of all, more jobs. But I think you can see in the energy that has gone into revitalizing Eugene’s downtown, people in this city are hungry for unique and creative things to do and see.”

Sands hopes ECA will expand and for the community to expand and engage with it. “I think the public’s perception needs to change. The public needs to know art can be a lot of different things,” he says. “Maybe, in a way, ECA is like the one guy stepping over and saying it’s OK to do this. They’re establishing themselves as a home for serious artists who are trying to push their boundaries.” ■

TAKE FIVE

At 80 years old, the UO's Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art is one of the hippest places to see art in the city. But it's also a cavernous place with nooks and crannies rotating thousands of pieces that can overwhelm the senses. So, where to start? Here, we asked five curators at the JSMA to pick their favorite pieces currently on view and tell us why the works are special.

Curators at the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art choose their favorite pieces BY ALEX NOTMAN

'Order (The Red Guards)'

BY XIAOZE XIE, 1999

Xiaoze Xie's mixed media installation is an artwork you must see in person, because photographs cannot convey its scale or boldness. The painting depicts a photo-realistically rendered newspaper snapshot of the burning of books ordered during China's Cultural Revolution, punctured by red metal spikes that symbolize the destructive march of Maoist Communism across China's literary and cultural legacy. — Jessi DiTillio, assistant curator of Contemporary Art

'Heaven, Earth, and Man'

BY JUNG DO-JUN, 2006

This dramatic contemporary work incorporates the circle and the vertical and horizontal lines that comprise the basic hangul vowel elements. Applied with consummate skill using a heavily laden brush, calligrapher Jung Do-jun's luminous red dot suggests the sun, while the vertical and horizontal strokes of black ink represent man and earth, respectively. — Anne Rose Kitagawa, chief curator

'The Last Audience of the Hapsburgs'

BY ARTUR VAN FERRARIS, 1918

This unfinished painting depicts the last royal audience ever given by Empress Zita of the House of Hapsburg. It was smuggled into the U.S. during WW II when one of the women depicted in the work fled Austria's and Hitler's rule. For years it stayed hidden in a carpet roll until it was given to the JSMA. I love the drama and mystery surrounding this piece and the partially rendered figures are absolutely enchanting. — June Koehler, assistant curator for the Arts of the Americas and Europe

'Book II'

BY PETER SARKISIAN, 2012

Sarkisian's work is filled with intelligence, humor and, if I may use the word, magic. Viewers see a digital projection of a man crawling over the open pages of a dictionary, underlining words and writing others, sometimes disappearing into the book's gutter. But how does the artist do this? It's critical for museums to share new art forms with their constituencies, and Sarkisian is a new media innovator. — Jill Hartz, executive director

'Leaving the Lecture: The Faculty Wives'

BY ANNE KUTKA MCCOSH, 1936

Anne Kutka McCosh considered "Leaving the Lecture: The Faculty Wives" to be one of her best works. It is important in the context of Kutka McCosh's career and personal growth as an artist, but equally important as a part of the UO's cultural history. — Danielle Knapp, McCosh associate curator

BENEFITS "Pancakes not Pipelines," an all-you-can-eat

When contestants on The Price is Right are asked to estimate the value of a shampoo bottle, packet of peanuts or jar of mayonnaise, they often come up pretty close, but here's a question that might throw you off: What does it cost to see The Price is Right Live! at the Hult Center on Monday? It's a lot less than you'd think — you might even need to pull that bullhonkey maneuver where you guess one dollar higher than the contestant before you. Yes, the stage show responsible for millions of dollars worth of satisfied contestants is coming to Eugene, and if you're in the audience, the chance to play Plinko or Cliffhangers or spin that ever-cathartic Big Wheel is within reach. Still stumped on the price of those tickets? Come on down and find out.

The Price is Right Live! starts 7:30pm Monday, Sept. 23, at Hult Center; $34.

See? Not bad at all.

A WHALE OF A TALE

Documentary reveals the underbelly of SeaWorld

BLACKFISH: Directed by Gabriela Cowperthwaite. Written by Cowperthwaite and Eli B. Despres. Cinematography, Jonathan Ingalls and Chris Towey. Editing, Cowperthwaite and Despres. Music, Jeff Beal. Magnolia Pictures, 2013. PG-13. 83 minutes. ★★☆☆☆

When I was a kid, I wanted to be a marine biologist and/or work at a marine park. As you can see, I did nothing of the sort. But one thing lingers from those younger days: a whopper of a sense of awe at the sight of whales, seals, even sea lions, those goofy things — and orcas.

I took that sense of wonder to the theater to see Blackfish, where, before five minutes had passed, it blossomed into a sense of dread. Blackfish uses as a framing device the 2010 death of orca trainer Dawn Brancheau, who was killed while working with a killer whale named Tilikum. Before she gets to this horrible incident, director Gabriela Cowperthwaite introduces us to a handful of former SeaWorld trainers, all of whom sound, at first, like I do in that first paragraph: They loved whales. They thought you had to have master's degrees to work with them. And then they got hired at marine parks, where it turned out swimming skills were more important than scientific knowledge.

The ex-trainers, rueful and frustrated, are the Greek chorus of Cowperthwaite's movie, which builds its case around Brancheau's death by going back in time and tracing Tilikum's life. The orca's timeline is interspersed with interviews that give context to Cowperthwaite's collection of old news footage, animated recreations and beautiful shots of orcas in the wild. Slowly, the pieces slot together: A neuroscientist discusses the development of the orca brain. A researcher talks about how orcas live in highly socialized groups. Two women, who saw Tilikum drag a woman underwater at a different sea park, years ago, describe what they saw. What looks like a beautiful, graceful killer whale begins to transform into a harried, traumatized creature with a history of snapping.

To Cowperthwaite's credit, she paints this picture with fistfuls of empathy both for the orcas and for the people who work (or worked) directly with them. (She could have asked her composer to lay off a little, though; the score works unnecessarily hard to amp up tension that is already present in the narrative.) Her ire is directed at management and the corporations who profit from the captivity and display of these animals. When the film touches on Brancheau's death in the beginning, it's a shocking, ugly moment; when Blackfish loops back around to explore what actually happened, it's no less ugly and tragic, but it is less shocking. Wrenching and pointed, what Blackfish argues for is, essentially, acceptance — that we accept that we don't and can't understand the minds of wild creatures. More practically, it argues against their captivity, both for their sake and the safety of the people who work with them. Blackfish is a powerful reminder of how willfully ignorant — and how selfish — humanity can be. ■

THE WOMAN IN THE MOON

Any discussion of Neko Case usually revolves around the voice — and a remarkable instrument it is: smoky, agile, delicate, strong, rich, expressive. Hers is a real sound that puts the fakers to shame.

But Case's latest release, The Worse Things Get, The Harder I Fight, The Harder I Fight, The More I Love You, is also about stories: gritty, strange and imbued with magic, realism and magical realism all at once. What made Case so great in the past — melancholy indie country and postmodern folk accentuated with bright flashes of straight-ahead rock 'n' roll — is still present. And as always, the mysterious shimmer in the cool, swift river is those lovely, haunting pipes of hers.

With The Worse Things Get, Case sharply focuses her eye for the surreal and the real, having come out of a prolonged bout of depression following the death of her grandmother and estranged parents. Shooting stars, kings and arboreal feasts fold into “Nearly Midnight, Honolulu,” a chilling a cappella track that tells a harrowing tale of witnessing a mother verbally abusing her child.

The record is also filled with sharp commentary on gender roles. Most notably on the rocker “Man” (featuring lead guitar from M. Ward) as she sings, “I’m a man. That’s what you raised me to be / I’m not an identity crisis.” In “Night Still Comes,” Case wails, “Did they poison my food? Is it cause I’m a girl? If I puked up some sonnets, would you call me a miracle?”

It seems the worse things get, the wiser Case becomes.

Neko Case plays with The Head and The Heart 7 pm Thursday, Sept. 19, at Cuthbert Amphitheater; $35 adv., $40 door. — William Kennedy

ONE CHILL PANDA

When Gold Panda's down-tempo electronica seeps into your ears, it can resurrect the feelings of being a small child sitting in the backseat during a road trip where your only possessions are a pair of headphones and the window-framed view of the world as it passes by in a whirl. The British producer, also known as Derwin, has distinguished himself from the hyper-amped electronic dance music crowd by producing mellow yet stimulating sample-based grooves — entrancing without the trance.

Gold Panda's remixes of Bloc Party and Telepathe tracks date back to 2007 and his debut album, Lucky Shiner, was released in 2010. His mixture of solely sampling recalls that of DJ Shadow but with a softer elegance like that of Jimmy Tamborello from Dntel and The Postal Service. Lucky Shiner's lead single is the irresistibly catchy "You," whose repetitive jingle of the word "you" backed with a bobbing hip-hop beat made it a quick fan favorite.

His latest record, Half of Where You Live, released in June, was heavily inspired by Gold Panda's tour of the world in support of his first album. The track "Brazil" came to formation after a night in São Paulo. "I remember looking out over the city, which looked like a modern Asian city with a mixture of neon and unkempt buildings," Gold Panda recently told pop culture website The Quietus. "When I was making 'Brazil,' I was adding more and more samples and it got a bit crazy and I felt it like I had sound-tracked my experience of being excited about getting to the centre of São Paulo."

Already on a world tour in support of his album about being on a world tour, Gold Panda's slow-burning technological jams will soothe and impress. Who knows, maybe Eugene will make the next round of his tour-inspired music. He can call it The Other Half of Where You Live.

Gold Panda plays with Slow Magic and Voices of Black 9 pm Wednesday, Sept. 25, at WOW Hall; $12 adv., $14 door. — Silas Valentino

BE STILL THEIR HEART

The members of Seattle's alt-folk The Head and the Heart are growing up. According to drummer Tyler Williams, their approach to music is too.
"When we first started out, music was our passion and it was a hope, a goal, that we would get to do this for a living," he says. "And then when you start to travel around and tour it does become your job in a way, but that doesn't necessarily make it a bad thing. We're just more responsible people at this stage in our lives."
Williams punctuates this final statement with a laugh, but the inherent maturity that comes with such growth is evident on the band's forthcoming release, Let's Be Still (out Oct. 15). The mid-tempo rock of the title track is accompanied by lyrics about savoring moments in this fast-paced life, while the stirring folk track "These Days Are Numbered" similarly touches on our collective temporality. Williams says the content is inspired by the band's shared experiences.
"We're in a situation where we've been together so long that we almost forget that we are individual people," Williams says, laughing again. "So the album's about identifying and having time away from your creative work because that maybe takes away from the deeper connections you can make in life."
The Head and the Heart play with Neko Case 7 pm Thursday, Sept. 19, at Cuthbert Amphitheater; $35 adv., $40 door. — Brian Palmer

SIMPLY HALIE

Over the past half decade or so, singer-songwriter Halie Loren has built an international reputation as a top-notch jazz chanteuse — an expert vocalist who is as comfortable sinking into the sultry croon of a classic like “My Funny Valentine” as she is reinterpreting a ’60s pop ditty like “Happy Together.” The Eugene native’s new album, Simply Love, released Sept. 10 in the U.S., has already pegged the top of the Billboard jazz charts in Japan and Asia. Loren celebrates a homecoming of sorts with a CD release show Saturday at Springfield’s Wildish Theater. Simply Love is Loren’s best work yet, sparkling in its production and by turns honey-sweet and sharply savvy in execution. Her gorgeous, pitch-perfect voice is more confident than ever, and she navigates each song — whether a standard or one of her own compositions — with an intimate understanding that feels like a personal valentine from her to her fans. Loren says this latest effort, regardless of the variety of songs and styles it contains, is her most complete and unified work yet. “It’s a little bit more conceptualized by feeling than any previous project we’ve done,” she explains, adding that the music captures “all these things that feel very elemental and vibrant to me. Of course, there’s the obvious theme of love, but it’s not only romantic love. It’s got a strong sense of the love of life, of being in the world.” Loren, at just 29, has five albums to her name as well as a basketful of awards and worldwide acclaim. Despite this, she still feels anchored in Eugene. “I live here,” she says. “I love touring, but as much as I love touring, I love coming home. I love being able to take all the experience and experimentation we’ve done, bringing all of those same ideas and same energy to a hometown crowd.” Halie Loren performs at her CD release show 7 pm Saturday, Sept. 21, at Wildish Theater, 630 Main St., Springfield; $15 adv., $20 door. ## NORTHWEST NUANCE

downtown library

The first person who waxed eloquent over Oregon author Brian Doyle's Mink River (Oregon State University Press, $18.95) was a sportswriter for the Salt Lake Tribune. The second was a lovely woman I met at recent Planned Parenthood fundraiser who had read it with her book club. Doyle's lovely Pacific Northwest tale with drops of magical realism appeals to people from all walks of life. The author of this novel, which The Oregonian called "shimmering" when it came out in 2010, will be at the downtown Eugene Public Library 2 pm Sunday, Sept. 22.

Doyle populates the fictional coastal town of Neawanaka with peculiar and entrancing cast of characters: a crow named Moses (taught to speak by a nun who read him the philosophy of Edmund Burke), Worried Man and Cedar of the Department of Public Works, school teacher Maple Head, artist No Horses and Daniel, a boy with three braids whose bike accident pulls the threads of the tale together. Mink River captures the rain-soaked Northwest with a flavor of salt, of salmonberries and some indigenous and Irish mixed in.

Molly Gloss calls
Doyle's work 'richly imagined, distinctive, beautiful.'

The interwoven inhabitants of Neawanaka dwell where the mission statement for the Department of Public Works includes that the department will "at all times practicable offer its services to residents, of all species, in matters having to do with public assistance and education, under any conceivable, or to be conceived, definition of public work." They dwell where Gaelic is spoken and Salish tales are told, where policemen listen to Puccini and lives are braided together like the channels of the fictional Mink River itself.

Mink River won high praise from fellow Northwest author David James Duncan (The River Why, The Brothers K) who writes: "The hauntings and shadows, shards of dark and bright, usurpations by wonder, lust, blarney, yearning, are coast-mythic in flavor but entirely bardic at heart."

And Molly Gloss, the author of my favorite historical-Sasquatch novel Wild Life, calls Doyle's work "richly imagined, distinctive, beautiful."

Read Mink River on your next camping trip, outing to the coast or the next time you have a moment to curl up with a book as the rainy season starts in Oregon. And come to the library on Sunday to hear Doyle speak about his life and work as a writer, including "headlong tales and chanted snippets of work having to do with miraculous and hilarious children, adamant hawks, excellent shoes, the snarl of war, the prayer of laughter, the salt and song and shaggy grace of Oregonness, brief lessons in basic Gaelic, side jaunts into why basketball is the coolest of sports and other pressing matters." The free talk is part of the Oregon Book Awards Author Tour, a program of Literary Arts. ■

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): "If Taylor Swift is going to have six breakups a year," observed comedian Bill Maher, "she needs to write a new song entitled 'Maybe It's Me.'" He was referring to Swift's habit of using her romantic misadventures to stimulate her lyric-writing creativity. With that as your prompt, Aries, I'll ask you to do some soul-searching about your own intimacy issues. How have you contributed to the problems you've had in getting the love and care you want? What unconscious behavior or conditioned responses have undermined your romantic satisfaction, and what could you do to transform them? The next eight weeks will be prime time to revolutionize your approach to relationships.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Philosopher Alan Watts used to talk about how the whole world is wiggling all the time. Clouds, trees, sky, water, human beings: Everything's constantly shimmying and giggling and waggling. One of our problems, Watts said, is that we're "always trying to straighten things out." We feel nagging urges to deny or cover up or eliminate the giggling. "Be orderly," we command reality. "Be neat and composed and predictable." But reality never obeys. It's forever doing what it does best: flickering and fluctuating and flowing. In accordance with astrological omens, Taurus, I encourage you to rebel against any natural tendencies you might have to fight the eternal wiggle. Instead, celebrate it. Rejoice in it. Align yourself with it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Author Elaine Scarry defines "the basic impulse underlying education" as follows: the "willingness to continually revise one's own location in order to place oneself in the path of beauty." Consider making this your modus operandi in the coming weeks, Gemini. Always be on the lookout for signs that beauty is near. Do research to find out where beauty might be hiding and where beauty is ripening. Learn all you can about what kinds of conditions attract beauty, and then create those conditions. Finally, hang around people who are often surrounded by beauty. This approach will be an excellent way to further your education.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): "Life is either always a tight-rope or a feather bed. Give me the tight-rope." So declared writer Edith Wharton. But she was an Aquarius, and more temperamentally suited to the tight-rope. Many of you Cancerians, on the other hand, prefer to emphasize the feather-bed mode. I suspect that in the next nine months, however, you will be willing and even eager to spend more time on the tight-rope than is customary for you. To get primed for the excitement, I suggest you revel in some intense feather-bed action in the coming weeks. Charge up your internal batteries with an extra-special deluxe regimen of sweet self-care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Half of a truth is better than no truth at all, right? Wrong! If you latch on to the partially accurate story, you may stop looking for the rest of the story. And then you're liable to make a premature decision based on insufficient data. The better alternative is to reject the partially accurate story and be willing to wait around in the dark until the complete revelation comes. That may be uncomfortable for a while. But when the full truth finally straggles in, you will be very glad you didn't jump to unripe conclusions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A Chinese entrepreneur named Nin Nan dreamed up a unique way to generate capital: He sold dead mosquitoes online for a dollar apiece, advertising them as useful for scientific research and decoration. Within two days, he received 10,000 orders. Let's make him your patron saint and role model for the next few weeks, Virgo. May he inspire you to come up with novel ways to stimulate your cash flow. The planetary omens suggest that your originality is more likely than usual to generate concrete rewards.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): "The most important thing is to find out what the most important thing is," wrote Shunryu Suzuki in his book Zen Mind, Beginner's Mind. That's your assignment for the next three weeks. Do whatever it takes to find out beyond any doubt what the most important thing is. Meditate naked an hour a day. Go on long walks in the wildest places you know. Convene intense conversations about yourself with the people who know you best. Create and sign a contract with yourself in which you vow to identify the experience you want more than any other experience on earth. No waffling allowed, Libra. What is the single most important thing?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sometime in the next nine months you may feel moved to embark on an adventure that will transform the way you understand reality. Maybe you will choose to make a pilgrimage to a sacred sanctuary or wander further away from your familiar comforts than you ever have before. Right now is an excellent time to brainstorm about the possibilities. If you don't feel ready to actually begin your quest, at least formulate a master plan for the magic moment when you will be ripe.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In the indigenous culture of Hawaii, "mana" refers to a spiritual power that may abide in people, objects, and natural locations. You can acquire more of it by acting with integrity and excellence, but you might lose some of it if your actions are careless or unfocused. For instance, a healer who does a mediocre job of curing her patients could lose the mana that made her a healer in the first place. I believe that similar principles hold true for non-Hawaiians. All of us have an ever-shifting relationship with the primal life force. What's the current state of your own personal supply, Sagittarius? It's time to make sure you're taking full advantage of the mana you have been blessed with. Your motto: "Use it or lose it."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Have you been getting enough? I doubt it. I think you should sneak a peek into the hiding place where your insatiable cravings are stored. If you're brave enough, also take a look at your impossible demands and your unruly obsessions and your suppressed miracles. Please note: I'm not suggesting that you immediately unleash them all; I don't mean you should impulsively instigate an adventure that could possibly quench your ravenous yearnings. But I do believe you will benefit from becoming better acquainted with them. You could develop a more honest relationship, which would ultimately make them more trustworthy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't tape your thumbs to your hands and stalk around pretending to be a dinosaur. Don't poke three holes in a large plastic garbage bag and wear it as a tunic while imagining that you are a feudal serf in a post-apocalyptic, sci-fi dystopia. Don't use a felt-tip marker to draw corporate logos on your face to show everyone what brands of consumer goods you love. To be clear: I would love you to be extravagantly creative. I hope you will use your imagination in novel ways as you have fun playing with experimental scenarios. But please exercise a modicum of discernment as you wander way outside the box. Be at least 20 percent practical.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): "Take a lover who looks at you like maybe you are magic," says the poet Marty McConnell. That's good advice, Pisces — not just in regards to your intimate relationships, but about all your other alliances, too. If you're seeking a friend or consultant or business partner or jogging companion or new pet, show a preference for those creatures who look at you like maybe you are magic. You always need to be appreciated for the sweet mystery and catalytic mojo you bring to your partnerships, but you especially need that acknowledgment now.

HOMEWORK: Unleash an outrageous boast about how you're going to pull off a certain feat that you've previously lacked the chutzpah to attempt. Testify at Freewillastrology.com.

SAVAGE LOVE

WORDS OF WISDOM BY DAN SAVAGE

My question is one of etiquette. My lesbian wife and I live in an apartment. The noise pollution between flats can be pretty bad. Anyone who lives in the building is aware of this, and keeping noise down after certain hours is a common courtesy. I wouldn't play loud music after a certain hour, or let doors slam, or break out the drum kit. If any of these things happen after around 11:30 p.m. on a work night, I don't think I'd feel any qualms about going around to whoever is being inconsiderate and asking them to keep it down. But what about noisy sex? My neighbor's girlfriend is pretty loud during sex. If the racket were being made, say, before midnight, I could bear it. It would be gross, because I think he's slimy and he has a terrible hipster mustache, but I wouldn't be writing to you. I'd just cope as best I could and try to fall back asleep. But what about sex at crazy o'clock? Is it okay for us to pound on the wall and ask them to keep it down? What's your opinion? Sleepy Lesbians Next Door

I happen to agree with Robert Lopez, Jeff Marx, and Jeff Whitty, creators of the Tony Award-winning musical Avenue Q, on the subject of apartment living, thin walls, and noisy sex: "You can be as loud as the hell you want when you're makin' love." Or, in this instance, your creepy neighbor with the hipster mustache and his girlfriend can be as loud as the hell they want when they're makin' love. But you and your wife — their annoyed neighbors — can be as loud as the hell you want when they're making love. You can pound on the walls, SLND, make your displeasure known, scream and yell, etc.

And even if your neighbors don't take the fucking hint and quiet the fucking the fuck down, SLND, the noise you make may bring their annoyingly loud sex to a quicker end. The females of certain species — including our own — get loud during sex, i.e., scream and yell, because it helps the males of their species climax more quickly. [Female copulatory vocalization: It is a real thing with its very own Wikipedia page. Look it up.] If his girlfriend's vocalizations are turning your inconsiderate mustachioed hipster neighbor on, the screams of his two lesbian neighbors could push him past the point of no return.

Squicked out by the thought of giving your inconsiderate hipster neighbor an aural reach-around? Look at it this way: The quicker he comes, the quicker it's over, and the sooner you can get back to sleep.

I was in a monogamous relationship with a woman for two years. We split up and remained platonic friends. Months later, on a drunken night, we had sex. At that point, neither of us had slept with anyone else. After we had sex that night, the sexual lion was out, and I slept with two others (using protection, of course). Now my ex-girlfriend and I may get back together, and she has asked the question: Have I slept with anyone else? So far, I have managed to avoid answering and, yes, we are currently sleeping together. Do I tell her?

Blowjobs And Rights Of Privacy

The failure to immediately answer certain questions in the negative is equal to answering in the affirmative. Examples: "Are you gay?" "Did you fuck my sister?" "Is that your butt plug?" Any attempt to avoid answering these questions — issuing a nondenial denial ("Me? Gay? Why would you think that?"), requesting an unnecessary clarification ("You mean your sister?"), stalling for time ("Can we talk about this later?") — serves as confirmation that, yes, you are gay and/or fucking the sister and/or the owner of that butt plug.

"Have you slept with anyone else?" is right up there with "Did you gay fuck my sister with that butt plug?" Your attempt to "avoid answering" the question was the answer to the question: Yes, you fucked other people.

So unless this woman is an idiot, BAROP, you don't need to tell her. She knows.

Straight male here. I took a writing course, and some of us students created a writing group. We meet and workshop the things we've been working on. One of the guys in the group is gay, and a while ago, he confessed that he had very strong feelings for me. I didn't have a problem with this, but I told him that I wasn't into guys. The other day, he sent me an e-mail telling me there was something he wanted to discuss. We met for dinner, and he told me that despite the fact that I claimed to be straight, he felt like I had been sending him messages to indicate my interest in him. He said that this was cruel and that he felt like I was teasing him. When I asked him for examples, he told me that when we had originally been in class together, he noticed that I had started to dress like him, and that this was sometimes a way closeted men showed interest in other men. He mentioned that one week he had worn a red sweater, and the following week I had worn a red T-shirt. He also said that he felt like the stories I had been workshoping in our group were secretly about him. I admit I'm not the stereotypical straight guy — I have good taste in shoes and I like art — but I know what I'm into and who I want to get naked with. I never showed any interest in this guy, I never led him on, this entire thing has taken place purely in his head. I told him all this, and now he says he is hurt and doesn't want to see me at the group. He suggested that we share the group, alternating meetings, but I refused. We're both adults who should have the emotional maturity to handle this. Am I being too harsh?

Pulled Into Drama

Closeted gay men don't use colored T-shirts to send messages to out gay men. They use Craigslist. Look, PID, Jeffrey Dahmer — aka the Milwaukee Cannibal — ate a friend of mine. By which I mean to say: Some gay people are insane. I'm not saying you're in danger of being drugged, raped, butchered, and eaten by this guy from your writing group. But the guy is — if your account is accurate — more than a little unpleasant and a whole lot batshit. Confide in some friends in your writing group about what's going on and be prepared to leave the group and/or form a breakaway group if Mr. Red Sweater continues to detect clues in your wardrobe. Also: Do not spend any more time alone with this guy. Someone who would accuse you of making super-secret passes at him via red T-shirts is capable of making baseless accusations about much worse.

And finally, PID, a bonus pro tip: Writers don't need a writers' group to write. They just need to write.

GAY AND COUPLED AND NOT MONOGAMOUS? A Savage Love reader and sex researcher is studying "relationship satisfaction among nonmonogamous gay couples." His research is focused on gay male couples that have sex with other men but not relationships with other men, i.e., not guys in poly relationships, just open ones. If you're gay, coupled, and nonmonogamous but not poly, and you have a few minutes to spare for science — science! — take the survey at socialsci.com/s/relationshipsurvey.

COVERING EUGENE / SPRINGFIELD / CRESWELL / COTTAGE GROVE / VENETA AND COMMITTED TO CREATING COMMUNITY FOR YOUNG ADULTS WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES IN LANE COUNTY, OR.

Serving Eugene's best soft pretzels, soups and other treats

We have put together a new food cart that will be part of our Pathway to Employment Program as we create opportunities and experiences for young adults in our community with intellectual or developmental disabilities. This cart made its debut in the Eugene Celebration Parade, this year. While the outside is ready, the interior needs sinks, refrigerator, water tanks, cooking grill, a new axle, tires, wheels, and plumbing and electrical work to finish it up for inspection for final approval and licensing. We will be partnering with Food For Lane County every Sunday to serve neighbors that need a meal at the Washington/Jefferson Park.

Our program participants will prepare and serve this food each week as part the educational experience they gain, as well as being paid a fair wage for their work and training. We will bring the cart to other events and popular locations with a diverse offering of soft pretzels, soups and other yummy treats. We are asking for your help and support in our work to establish a truly inclusive community activity. To make a tax deductible donation, please visit our site: www.realitykitchen.org for all the details. There you will learn more about us and our work. Follow and "like" us on Facebook, of course, and feel free to contact us at 541.337.1323.

We're moving to a brand new location

We offer our services as Job Developers and Coaches, as well as Cooking Skills classes and group-cooking activities. We share the fun of budgeting and shopping for, planning and preparing healthy meals. We are grateful for the help and support so many have given to make this dream a reality. We invite you to join us in our new home, on the main bus line and close to everywhere you want to be.

We will bring back Acoustic Reality, our Monday Open Mic Night, events and fundraisers, speakers and much more as we establish our academic program in a wonderful new kitchen and dining room, with a drive up window too. Having a disability should not be a barrier to finding or keeping meaningful employment. Our program is developed to open windows of opportunity for people with a variety of abilities at all different skill levels. Reality Kitchen Nonprofit will create employment opportunities within the community through a series of placements and trainings. The program is designed to individualize delivery of the curriculum and successfully train and support long-term, meaningful employment of individuals.

After the difficult decision was made to move out of the Whiteaker Neighborhood, we looked around town for the perfect place. We found it at 2190 W 11th where the good folks at Hodgepodge have been serving up fine Hawaiian food and ice cream treats for more than 13 years. Reality Kitchen will be transitioning into this ideal facility to run programs and host events while creating jobs in our community. Hodgepodge will remain open serving their regular menu until we secure the full lease. Unlike our first home, there will be heat in the Winter, cool air in the Summer and plenty of room to park for all the friends and neighbors that supported us at our previous location.
